

UFO observations (pp. 131-141)

This concludes the investigation of the witness of the curious spacecraft over Bochum on 25 June 2010. It is suggested that he observed rather common stimuli (e.g., Chinese lanterns and planes), but got so excited that he tried to interest many official German authorities, and went into a ufological frenzy. Also discussed is a photographic case from 21 August 2012, over Wesseling, where the object is identified as a foil balloon in form of Disney's "Princess Castle".

A new explanation for the Livingston CE II? (pp. 142–144)

The author outlines the theory of John Alison who believes this famous encounter can be reduced to Robert Taylor seeing a water reservoir in the forest at the same time as he suffered a transient ischaemic attack.

Tainted, Toxic & Taboo (pp. 145–149)

A translation of Tyler R. Kokjohn's contribution in Paratopia 1:1, where the author discusses the diverging standards in normal scientific research and the loose standards used in abduction research – which result in the fact that mainstream scientists will never take an interest in the subject.
